ALLOWING A NEW DREAM...

Joy Dakinisun

What if the new world is not far away, but already waiting in the way we choose, work, love, create, and trust ourselves again? This chapter opens a hopeful vision of life beyond fear, comparison, and old systems

Born from Joy Dakinisun's own journey through change, uncertainty, and deep transformation. This book opens a new perspective on life, money, and the systems we live in.

- ✧ That safety can come from within, not only from outside structures
- ✧ That money can become a supportive energy — not a source of fear
- ✧ That a new way of living is already emerging... through us

Allowing a New Dream...

Chapter:

Tara's Dream of Change

"I also love this idea of equality, but in a different understanding. My idea of equality is that everyone has the same chance to be unequal, to have the chance to be unique and themselves. Certainly, they all are different, and a society with no diversity or differences is impoverished. Beauty, wealth, and color evolve from diversity." ~ Osho

Tara's diary:

My vision of a new world

"If money were no option with a basic financial floor, everyone would follow their heart and find the education that fits their potential. People walk into a company and ask for a job because they are convinced of their potential for this job. They are naturally educated, and during the work, they learn more. They go with self-confidence and not as usual with this fear that they are not enough. Synchronicity brings things and people together. Every employer gives this employee space for a try because it can permanently be changed again. These changes are no longer dependent on fear of existence and money.

No one any longer has to think about how much an unsuccessful attempt would cost him. In every meeting, there is an enrichment for life.

Yes, I hear you all argue that there will be too much in some categories of work and in others less employees. Why are you thinking like that?

You no longer trust universal self-regulation in finding possibilities always there for you. You don't trust yourself or the people in your life. You don't believe in ways and behaviors of love and compassion and that we can communicate and find solutions and change together. Everything can be corrected so that everyone is, in a way, satisfied. The reason is that you always need someone who confirms your actions. Otherwise, you don't feel OK. I am so pleased about the young people who take their path with self-confidence. Many thanks to the parents who gave this young generation a wonderful, emotionally safe space to have a basis for strong self-confidence, self-awareness, and a natural faith in life.

These young generations don't need anyone, not even a partner. They are abundant. They are happy if they find a partner, a lover, and it feels good. If not, they still are happy. Friends, happiness, passion in what they are doing,- joy, and love for life, are the most essential things in their lives.

They also don't assume they will work the same job their whole life. These young people have such a feeling of self-responsibility that there is no longer a valuation system with school marks in school. They only note "took part ". Teachers and leaders must reflect on their actions because everyone questions their behavior and knowledge. Quality no longer depends on certification, but on the opinion and awareness of the people, the students, who take part."

Tara's dream of a new world would not come true only with a Basic Income. This Unconditional Basic Income would start the process for most people to find self-love, self-confidence, trust in self-worth, and life again. So, the UBI team had to offer ways to support them in this path. There were two worlds in this reality they lived in. People, primarily unconscious, work in the economic business and are pressured to perform. People who lived next to this world named themselves spiritual or light workers and went into therapy, self-discovery groups, and workshops to balance their lives. The UBI team wanted to learn from these people. How could they convince these people to work for their vision? They knew that the knowledge and wisdom of these people were an essential part of change.

But the connection was missing. But one part was nothing without the other. Business and daily life were incomplete without the power of spirituality. Working without inspiration is not satisfying because the heart and true self are not at home during this work.

Even if these spiritual people were outside this real world, they were still a part of it. Without this reality, they would never have learned the lessons that caused them to step out for a while. This person had important information about how they could help change society more humanly and smoothly. Why? Because they studied and reconnected to ancient wisdom. So, what is missing in our culture, in the people, still is familiar. It just had gone forgotten. It's time to rediscover and connect old and new wisdom and knowledge.

The journal of visions:

“A positive impact for change:

We, indeed, don't have to go back into the wilderness and live like the aboriginal people. But the essence of their knowledge and wisdom is more important than ever. It should be in a language that fits into these times and should be experienced in a way that fits our society, time, and consciousness.

Who is interested in the spiritual path nowadays? Some people are those who lost their jobs. Some are retired. Some are rich and take timeouts and never return because they can afford to stay away from regular work. Most of them are women who can afford it, or their husbands support them in participating in self-development workshops. These people find satisfaction in all kinds of spiritual paths, leading to more self-awareness and self-consciousness. All other people are functioning without even being in nature for some time of the day. They are distracted from a natural healthy rhythm of living.”

To come in contact with the people who integrated their spiritual path, Tara collected many addresses during her time with spirituality. So, they started working groups on this issue. Many people answered them in the mail and shared their experiences and ideas with them. Some traveled to them, and in a great meeting, they learned from each other and discussed the following steps they wanted to take together. Tara knew most of the people from her past and was happy to see them again. She also traveled to some of them to work with them personally.

She always took Barbara or Savio with her on her journeys, and being home again, they all discussed what had happened.

For Nevio, it was important that these people they chose for their offers for personal growth still had contact with daily life and the reality of society.

They also should have the vision to connect these two worlds again to a whole picture.

So, both were astonished and happy that many young generations contacted them and explained their new work, such as the DNX movement (one of the digital nomad movements) and their podcasts.

With these podcasts, they interviewed people worldwide who lived very successful lives in every area of life. That means they were healthy, wealthy, financially, emotionally satisfied, and had friends and family. They had found a life purpose for themselves, inspiring them to always get up in the morning excitedly. These people all wanted to share their methods to reach a high quality of living.

Most of them still worked in the economy, in jobs, or as teachers, and some just took the opportunity to connect these worlds again by working for this beautiful vision of UBI.

Tara and Nevio chose some of them to translate the message of this world of consciousness into different languages with different words. It shouldn't sound like these esoteric words.

Many scientists already connect with the spiritual world, calling it the quantum field and using physics to explain what's happening in the invisible world. Nevio just wanted to be sure that people in business and daily life could easily understand and become curious about it.

A few were now engaged in education and health systems. Therefore, Nevio had to ease the training guidelines for teacher education programs so that they could work with the certification they all had. First, next to the usual subjects in school, they created a new topic called "Consciousness and awareness training" and "Learning from nature for daily life". In this subject, they taught emotional management, the signs of the body, awareness experience, and energy balance.

These subjects were also integrated into teacher training. But initially, the new spiritual teachers had to bring great compassion into their work because they met with refusal from the other teachers.

But all these New Energy Teachers, as Tara loved to call them, found their way to convince the others of the positive impact these subjects would have on their own teaching.

The children and young people would pay more attention, and the lessons would be more attractive because they would participate in discussions more openly and excitedly.

This whole thing about certification, examinations, examiners, teachers, this shining illusory world was rigid and inflexible. Tara and Nevio had to create more space for progress.
