Allowing a New Dream...

Chapter:

Discover the gift in the reason for lying to yourself

This chapter belongs to the Dream Weaver Journey because every real dream asks for honesty.

Not harsh honesty. Not self-judgment. The kind of honesty that lets the hidden truth breathe again.

The Dream Weaver map helps you listen to the dream that has not left you.

This chapter helps you notice where that dream may have been covered by fear, pressure, or old roles.

It speaks about authenticity, feelings, relationships, courage, communication, and the moment we stop pretending in order to please others.

Let it support you in remembering that your truth is not a problem — it is the beginning of your next creation.

As you read, gently notice:

Where am I ready to be more honest with myself?

What part of my dream becomes clearer
when I stop pretending?

Chapter:

Discover the gift in the reason for lying to yourself

Tara's diary: "We only will see a fundamental change in our world and living;

- * if people no longer pretend to be someone in a specific way to please others
- * if they begin to be courageous in the morning by taking timeout from their job for the day because they feel tired and burned out and notice that their body needs to rest
- * if men and women are honest with them, being totally overburdened with their family, are no longer satisfied and happy with their relationship, being honest that they thought it would be easier with children
- * if they no longer use the excuse to stay together because of the children, instead find new solutions for togetherness
- * if lovers notice that they were lovers and now the sex with each other is no longer what they dream of, the whole relationship is dead, and they are already interested in someone else
- * if young people courageous but sensitively start to tell their parents what they don't want them to do any longer, how they instead want to be treated

* if young people also tell this to their teachers ~ teachers who are really young and too inexperienced in real-life situations, and now they should teach young people knowledge for life

* when people no longer go to the doctor to give their body with the expectation that the doctor should fix it, but also say “no” to medical treatment, go home and treat themselves with more sleep, tranquility, more drinking, detoxing, and regenerating, and much more, I could add here.....

✧ Then tomorrow, the people that didn't say hello to each other yesterday, however, would discover that they aren't as bad as they believed and enjoy a drink together.

✧ Then there will be the couple and family, who sit together and find a solution, what they have to change so that every member of the small community could feel loved, comfortable, respected, and honored. They become people who let go of the old past and begin a new chapter of life.

✧ Then, there will be education systems that work with life-experienced people and build up a new education system in which success is natural because human beings are at the center of awareness and feel appreciated. Creation and success are things that naturally follow.

Therefore, most of us first have to be aware again of their feelings, the key to every state of clarity.”

In these words of Tara, the UBI team found the following keywords:

“Authenticity, awareness, ability to deal with conflict, to be worth, speaking for ourselves, communicating and solution-oriented, together, naturally....”

The essential prerequisite to living in this conscious way with these qualities is the world of feelings of a human being. With this, you can build your own inner government guiding you through life.”
